About fifty Chinamen went down to work on the new Oahu plantation this morning. Learning that going by rail their baggage would be carried free, they misconstrued the information to be free carriage of baggage independent of themselves. Therefore they piled their stuff in the baggage room of the station, and set out on foot for their destination. They will wait awhile for their changes of raiment, unless they either agree to pay railway toll therefor or return and pack the dunnage on their backs.
